Rev. Dr. D. J. Beale, who was formerly a member of the synod of Baltimore, with which the Presbyterian churches in Washington are affiliated, has been appointed by the general assembly of the Presbyterian Church agent to solicit subscriptions for a monument to Francis Makemie, who was one of the founders of Presbytertianism in this country. Makemie came to America from the north of Ireland in 1683 by invitation of Col. Wm. Stevens. He found in Maryland and Delaware a considerable number of Presbyterians who had come hither because of the persecuhome by the Stuarts. The increase of population, with improved means of communication, made it possible to give colonial Presbyterianism an organized form. In this movement Makemie was the master spirit. His journeyings extended from South Caro-

York and barely escaped the same treat-ment in New Jersey, because he was not licensed by the civil governments of those colonies. In the year 1706 Makemie secured colonies. In the year 1706 Makemie secured the organization of the presbytery of Phil-It is urged by those having the matter in charge that it would be very proper to erect a mounment to Francis Makemie in the neighborhood where his remains are buried, and on the ground which he gave to one of the congregations which he founded—that of Rehoboth, in a neighboring state. The synod of Baltimore, the presbytery of New Castle and the general assembly have earnestly indorsed the erection of a monument to Makemie and the endowment of the Rehoboth Church. It is hoped to secure $10,000 for the monument and $40,000 for the church endowment. It is understood that steps are being taken by some of the church people of this city to form a society modeled after "Country Week," a representative and ideal phase of he various movements intended to give the children of the very poor a few days' outing in the country which they cannot otherwise obtain.

Country Week means principally boarding of children for ten days each in regularly investigated and inspected farm houses. Children are received in these country homes often in parties of ten or twelve from the same locality. This plan is considered superior to the community sum-mer home, for it combines, with the great-est amount of holiday pleasure, the benefits much pleasure as is safe for them.

LAKE GEORGE, N. Y.

The pastors of the Southern Methodist Churches here have been informed that the woman's board of home missions has de cided to raise not less than $10,000 as twentieth century thank offering for th equipment and endowment of its educational institutions, and their aid in getting that sum has been requested, but it is to be a part of the $1.500,000 called for by the general conference, not an outside effort, nor is its collection to be made in any way an-tagonistic to it. The institutions which it s preposed to benefit, all of which are un der the care of the board, are the Friends-bury Home, Baltimore, Md.; the Sue Ben-nett Memorial School, London, Ky.; the Industrial Home and School, Greenville, Tenn.; the Cuban schools in Florida and Key West; the Chinese and Japanese schools in California, and Ann Browder Cunningham Home, Dallas, Texas; the lat-ter for the training of city missionaries and tescue workers. One of these institutions, Friendsbury Home, was recently bequeath-ed $50,000, on condition that the board raises $10,000 within the next two years.

The individual states received $10,399,015.60; the counties about $5,000,000, and the municipalities more than $34,000,000. Besides this there were fines, customs duties, taxes on realty and personal property used in the business to be added, and which brought the revenue for the year up to more than Another matter that the report touches upon at considerable length is the question of the experience and practice of employers with regard to the use of intexicants by those they hire. Careful inquiry was made among the large establishments of the country, and the managers were asked to give the result of their observations. These in-quiries related to the influence of night work, overwork, exposure, irregularity of work, shorter hours of labor, etc., upon the use of intoxicants; the relation of pay days, holidays and Sundays to such use; the oc cupations in which most abuse occurs; es-tablishments and occupations in which use of liquors is not allowed; reasons for requiring certain employes not to use liquors; means taken to prevent the use of liquors, and means suggested to lessen their con-

the question of the successorship to the present pope has again come to the front with those who have control of the matter. The writer of the communication says:

He is a man of indomnitable will power, and has worked his way up under great difficulties. A Young Matron's Way of Getting Her Errands Done. "Yes, cigarettes are a bad habit, but there s compeasation in all things," said a young married woman to a Star man who was trying to lay the blame of his smoking on a silver pocket case his best girl had given

"You see," continued the young matron, "I would rather Ned didn't smoke at all, but so long as he does I prefer cigarettes and stipulate he shall roll them himself. It's the only way I can get my errands done for me down time or ever make him remember to pay the gas bill on the last day before the discount is off. Oh, it is easy enough to work. You see, I go on the theory that it is not willful neglect of his home and family that makes a man forget to do down-town errands, but the simple fact that they get crowded out of his head while he is at business.

"Now when Ned starts off in the morning I take his package of cigarette papers and write memoranda on them in pencil. If it is stuff from the green grocer's I make a list on the top paper in the pack and he is sure to see it about the time h gets to the corner, and he goes in and leaves the order. If I want him to telephone Alice to run over from Mount Pleas-ant to luncheon, I note the fact about three papers forward, and he is sure to see it soon after he gets to the office. When I have anything I want him to run out and attend to at noon, I put it about on the sixth paper and he is certain to read it just as he is coming back to the office from his own lucheon. And if it is something I want brought home for dinner, I only need to write 'bread' or 'beafsteak, or whatever it is on the tenth paper, and it comes home promptly. I tell you there is nothing like executive ability when it comes to manag-ing your husband."
